

NTEU 2008: Federal employee health care benefits

We know all too well that health care costs are on a one-way ride—up.

Congress can help federal employees better handle the impact.

One way is to boost the government's share of premium costs from an average 72 percent to an average 80.

A bill in Congress would do just. But elected representatives are going to have to hear from all of us to get it approved. And while we're at it, let's tell them we want a government contribution to dental and vision plans, too.

We can do it.

Because we have a strong union and a strong voice.
