Telephone Briefing March 3, 2020

NTEU and the Bureau of the Fiscal Service (BFS) had an initial discussion about the Agency's plans regarding the current coronavirus outbreak. At this time, the Agency is making hand sanitizer available for employees at all BFS locations, and they are working with their facilities management team to ensure the cleanliness of all facilities.

The Agency will soon be conducting a "tabletop" exercise to determine whether it is prepared to carry out its mission in a pandemic-type scenario, which would include increased telework availability for employees.

The Agency will also be conducting a test of its emergency notification system make sure it is properly functioning. BFS has advised us that it continue to communicate with us about the coronavirus and the safety risks to BFS employees, and it will brief us on additional steps it plans to take in response to the outbreak.
